Ball park plans discussed

tions and voted to require a $150 user fee for all groups using the field, and to restrict its use to baseball and softball.

Johnson told the Council that Appomattox is "On the verge of having a Class A ball park."

He outlined improvements to the park which he would like to pursue, including fences down both foul lines, a new concession stand with bathrooms, a press box on top of the existing concession stand, a public address system, and two new sets of grandstands.

He noted these improvements would put the facility on a par with any ball park in the state, and that the town could bid for state tournaments to be played at the facility. He noted that the larger state tournaments bring "a lot of business into town and are good ways of generating revenue for the ball park."

Councilman asked Johnson to investigate the cost of the various improvements he proposed, and report back with this information at a later Council meeting.

Council also voted to purchase a new telephone system for the town office. The system will cost $2,312, which includes equipment, installation and warranty.
